Randall Consulting announces the official opening of its consulting and training business. It is geared toward providing solutions for Law Firms, Government agencies and the corporate world. It will specialize in Litigation Support Consulting and training, Electronic Discovery, Project Management and Software testing and development.

With a location just minutes from Washington DC, Randall Consulting can help with any type of Litigation Support issue in the nation's Capitol. As well as in most cities across the United States.

Randall Consulting offers comprehensive Project Management solutions. It can range from advising on the proper service provider for you to taking charge of a project from start to finish. The goal is simple excellent customer service and experience leads to a project being done correctly each and every time.

With the new Federal Rules of Civil Procedure going into effect in December there will be many more new to Electronic Discovery. Randall Consulting will specialize in helping service providers and law firms understand the ever growing area of EDD. This will include Project Management, training, consulting on the right software for you as well as small processing projects.

There are times where it is hard to test new software geared toward Litigation Support and Electronic Discovery. Let Randall Consulting with years of experience in testing these programs help ease those pressures. They will test a specific program thoroughly and give back a detailed report with the strengths and weaknesses. If there are any bugs found that will also be included. If you are a software company let Randall Consulting help with software research and analysis.

The website is also meant to be a resource for others. It will include articles written by the founder and Senior Trainer/Consultant, John Randall. As included will be links to additional articles, Case Law in relation to Electronic Discovery. There is also a message board for a free flowing of ideas. It was created as a way to share thoughts, concerns, ideas, questions and answers.

Please email us at info@randallconsulting.net with any press releases of upcoming events you have. This way it can be posted on the News and Events page.

In 2007 Randall Consulting will be launching a larger training division. It has arisen because of certain needs in this industry for more detailed training. The first class to be offered will be a Litigation Support Boot Camp Class. This will mostly be geared toward service providers looking to understand Litigation Support. So they can better serve their client needs and produce error free work. Small law firms are also encouraged to attend. It will be held in up to four separate locations next year. An Introduction to Electronic Discovery class will also be introduced. As well as an advanced Electronic Discovery processing class will be offered. Anyone that takes the Litigation Support Boot Camp class will also receive basic Electronic Discovery training.

Webinars will also be offered each month on different topics. The majority of these will be free of charge. For more information on the training visit their website or email training@randallconsulting.net.

In addition large research projects will be undertaken where there are needs in this industry. The first such report will be on In-House Electronic Discovery programs. This will be followed by a report on Online Review Tools.
